What is Necessary if We Would Carry Philadelphia Next Year.

The Republican party in the city of Philadelphia is to-day in the opposition, and the struggle next year is for us to regain the ascendancy which we have lost. In the tactics which are necessary to fight a battle in the minority, much greater care is required than when we act only on the defensive. It is necessary that every force should be exerted, that every engine which argument or energy can bring to bear should be used. If we would succeed, there must be left no stone unturned, to use a trite simile, in our efforts to win. The errors which might have been passed silently by when we were certain of success, and struggled only for a large majority, now become obstacles which must be removed. If, under such circumstances, that portion of the party which should be the head and the good right arm has proved itself both powerless and imbecile, it is unnecessary for us to say that its removal is of the most vital consequence to secure victory. The Republican party, with all its offices, all its prestige, all its patronage and majority, was changed from the administration to the opposition by the weakness and worthlessness of its City Executive Committee and their nominees.
Possession, which is nine-tenths of the influence necessary to success, was crippled and rendered inoperative by these men, who have assumed the self-appointed office of managing the party. Corruption and incompetency lost us the day, and if we would retrieve the disaster we must cast forth all who have proved themselves possessed of either one or the other of these qualities. The first step in the way to regain our losses is to change the party managers. The present City Executive Committee is utterly unfitted for the task of managing our party. It has lost the confidence of those who supply the money to carry on a campaign. If they are retained, the gentlemen of the party will refuse to work with them.
If they are retained, the newspapers of the party will refuse to work in their behalf.
They cannot, after the exhibition of the last election, gain that support which is the great essential to such a committee; and it is, therefore, absolutely necessary that they be all superseded by men who come fresh from the ranks. The old political hacks have lost us the city. We can do no worse by taking new men, and new men we must and will have.
The immense influence for good or evil which such a central committee can exert is proved by the wonderful power of the Democratic committee during the last campaign. There was no laggard allowed in the councils of our opponents. Secret circulars, personal canvassing, and systematic work was the order of the day. While our leaders were sitting on Chesnut street, waiting with supine carelessness for the victory to fall into their hands, the enemy were at work. They threw their influence in favor of good nominees. They did not nominate each other and act as a clique.
They took the best available man. And it was to their activity and the mismanagement of our own committee that we are indebted for the loss of the city and State. This evil must be remedied if we would succeed next year.

Having secured a live City Executive Committee, composed of the best men of the party, there only remains for us to nominate good men, and the victory is our own. A majority of the voters of Philadelphia are still with us, but they are not willing to accept a mandate from a "ring" which buys up nominations. If we would have the people with us, we must let the people make the nominations. In the selection of candidates, and in the support which we as journalists shall give them, we lay down one broad rule:—Every man who holds or has held office must give way to new men. This may exclude certain good officers. It doubtless will.
But the end to be accomplished is sufficiently important to warrant such an exclusion.
Besides, it does no injustice. These gentlemen, while there are so many worthy men in the party who have never held office, cannot certainly demand with justice a retention for more than one term. They have no right to even that. It is a favor accorded; and when there is such a host of competitors, it is only proper that the offices should be distributed among them all, with some attempt at equality, and not managed as a monopoly. We therefore desire to see new men nominated for all the offices; and will not pledge our support after nomination, and certainly will not give our support before, to any who are mixed up with the "rings" or "State House Row." Some such renovation is absolutely necessary to success. We exhausted our space and time in attempting to hear up a load, last October, which would have sunk any party in the world. We do not intend to do so again. A dead-weight is not a cheerful or comfortable burden; and if the party leaders see fit to nominate such unworthy candidates, or appoint such unworthy committees, they cannot expect that the papers of the party will do all the work, when they do nothing but impose the burden. If a new set of men, pure, well known, men of means and ability, are nominated, the party will succeed, and all the aid which can be given by us will be most willingly accorded. Unless such men are nominated, defeat is certain.

We therefore, speaking for the people and the principles of the Republican party, say to those who now hold office and leadership:—
"Stand aside; you have proved yourself unable to carry the city. Give way to new men, and see if principles and purity are not more efficient than chicanery!" Such is the universal sentiment of those who are the pillars, financially and personally, of the Republican party, and the "ring" dare not venture to let these words pass by unheeded. If we do but learn wisdom from the past, our defeat will be a blessing. If we do not, a succession of defeats await us.

Payment of the National Debt.

A Bostonian has undertaken to show that the National debt can be paid by the close of the present century, and that without seriously inconveniencing the people. Our total debt, including currency, is less than $2,500,000,000.
An estimate of the present population of the country places it at 36,000,000, which would give a per capita share of only $69.50, with an annual charge of $4.17 for the interest on the whole, at 6 per cent. During the decade from 1850 to 1860, the annual increase of the wealth of New York and Ohio was 6 1/2 per cent.; and if the same proportionate increase continues during the present decade, this increase in these two States alone will be sufficient in amount by 1870, not only to cancel the entire debt, but to leave a surplus of $300,000,000.
But the increase in the non-seceding States during the period from 1850 to 1860 was even greater, being 8 1/2 per cent. per annum. At the same rate, the increase from 1860 to 1870 inclusive, would amount to $10,087,000,000, or more than four times the debt. Reducing the rate of increase to 4 per cent., to provide for all reasonable contingencies, and it would amount, during the eight years which have elapsed since 1860, to $4,038,000,000, leaving a surplus of $1,500,000,000 after the payment of the debt. The enthusiastic mathematician of the "Hub" continues:—
"The gain in property of the non-seceding States from 1850 to 1860 was rather over 120 per cent. Estimating the future decennial increase at only one-half this average, or 60 per cent., probably far below what will prove the actual result, and leaving out entirely the seceding States, the valuation of the loyal States in the year 1860 will be $77,350,000,000, of dollars, a sum which will present itself less than three per cent."

The Progress of the Broad Street Bill.

Through a mistake in the reports of the proceedings of Councils yesterday, we neglected to give the proper credit for moving a reconsideration of the vote on the Broad Street bill to the gentlemen who have been most instrumental in securing that movement. It was Mr. A. Wilson Henszey who made the motion, and it was seconded by Mr. William E. Littleton. These gentlemen well deserve the sincere thanks of the great mass of our citizens for their advocacy of the popular cause in opposition to the contractors. They worked with zeal to accomplish the end, and to them must be attributed most of the success.
When the question comes up in Select Council on Wednesday next, we have no doubt but that the bill will pass over the veto by a handsome majority. The cause is so intrinsi-cally excellent, and the arguments and merits all on one side, that we do not see how the representatives of the people can fail to pass the bill. We are well assured that the necessary two-thirds vote will be secured, as the members, who represent the masses, while they may sometimes err in judgment, rarely deliberately act in opposition to the declared wishes of all their constituents.
